BHAGALPUR: Wary of being influenced by technology, Parchis, which combines board games and social networking, has been launched here. Parchis was launched in June this year by Microsoft Garage, a Mumbai-based outfit that provides technology products and services in the area of startup communities. The company is also developing a new mobile game app "Parchis" on Windows Phone. Speaking to TOI, senior software architect and Parchis founder Ulf Albrecht said that the startup community around Delhi was "too conservative" to embrace new technologies. However, he added, this could be changing slowly. Parchis, which started as an Indias first online board game where users could play in real time against each other, was aimed at bringing about a change in people's attitudes, he said. "Our aim was to start a community where people talk and interact with each other using technology. We wanted to create a community where people could 'play' Parchis without leaving their computers," Albrecht said. On the other hand, the Parchis app is designed for all devices. The app is a combination of a simple game and a social networking app, according to Albrecht. "The game is played using a chess-like board where two players try to manipulate each other's pawns to get to the end.
