The river flows from a source in Tibet, 3,500 m (11,482 ft) above sea level, before emerging from the Himalayas into India. The river has its headwaters in a glacier which is 80 m (262 ft) high, on the south side of the Himalayas at Kangchenjunga, the world's third highest mountain. The glaciers melt in the summer, but the water percolates through to nourish the fertile Ganges basin. The Ganges meanders through and irrigates the Gangetic Plain before joining the Yamuna River at Allahabad. Read more Watch Full Movies on m 100% free.
