Click Here to Download!Q: How to return the object in promises? So I am following an example about rendering html with pug. My renderHtml function is this one: `function renderHtml(template) { return new Promise((resolve, reject) => { fs.readFile(template, 'utf8', (err, html) => { if (err) { reject(err); return; } resolve(html); }); }); } I am rendering the file in this way: var ctx = new context(); renderHtml("./templates/page.pug").then((html) => { ctx.render("./pages/layout", { html, layout: "./layout" }) .catch((err) => { console.log(err); }); Now I want to create another function that gets the template string and renders it. I tried this: fs.readFile(template, ' f3e1b3768c`
