Corel.DVD.MovieFactory.Pro.v7.00.398.Incl.Keymaker-CORE Corel.DVD.MovieFactory.Pro.7.00.398.Incl.Keymaker-CORE Yes, I know, the news last week that the U.S. House of Representatives had passed a spending bill containing ObamaCare, including the funding for Title II of the law, seemed like a bad omen. But the news this week that the Senate has passed the bill that would fund the government through mid-November, even though it does not include funding for the implementation of ObamaCare, proves that the nation's attention can be easily distracted. The ObamaCare legislation passed by the House has no chance of surviving in the Senate, even if the Democrats capture the Senate and Obama maintains the White House. The legislation passed the House with 235 House Democrats voting yes, and with just 55 Republicans voting yes. That is a total of three more Democrats than Republicans in the House. With so many Democrats who were elected in 2010 on the record as voting in favor of ObamaCare, and with four Democrats still sitting on the fence and considering voting for the legislation, ObamaCare cannot survive when it reaches the Senate floor. Unless a miracle happens, the Senate can pass any spending bill that is signed by the president. House Speaker John Boehner and Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid have not agreed to any budget deal that will make the Senate believe that a Republican president will sign any bill that includes funding for ObamaCare. The President has a long, long history of signing bills that are rejected by the U.S. Congress. When the political cards are stacked against any president, he will not lose a battle with Congress. This is the lesson from the history of U.S. presidents who have been told that they cannot win a battle with Congress. I have written an opinion piece for Townhall.com that explains why ObamaCare cannot pass the Senate without a miracle. I explain why I believe that Obama will lose the next battle with the U.S. Congress because I am one of the 55 Republicans who will not vote for ObamaCare. Last week, I wrote a letter to a pro-Obama senator explaining why
