Share this: Twitter Facebook Reddit The Pentagon is preparing to reduce its military presence in Iraq by nearly 50 percent, according to The Wall Street Journal. On May 21, The Journal reported that the withdrawal of some 2,000 American troops, currently serving at the Iraq-Syria border, had begun. Nearly 50 percent is not that significant, but it's more than we were led to believe. Some 3,000 U.S. troops are now stationed in Iraq, with the rest stationed in Kuwait, Germany, and elsewhere. An October 2008 defense budget report anticipated that between 5,000 and 6,000 soldiers would be withdrawn in 2010. The Journal's story Friday said the drawdown was
