federal government that was signed into law by President Donald Trump, was sponsored by a Democrat. The 116th Congress has a number of accomplishments to its credit. Democrats were able to successfully pass the Preserving Access to Affordable Prescription Drugs Act, better known as the MACRA legislation. The Republicans, in contrast, could not find a consensus to cut tax loopholes for wealthy individuals. However, the Democrats failed to pass any other significant domestic policy legislation, including legislation to extend health care insurance to children, improve the lives of working Americans, increase the minimum wage, or provide retirement security. Democrats also failed to pass any immigration or infrastructure bills and did not address climate change or ease gun violence. Only one piece of legislation, the Senate's repealing and replacing the Affordable Care Act, was sponsored by a Democrat, but the House failed to pass the legislation.
