This first-of-its-kind information can be used to enhance ball physics, give players improved ball movement and gameplay, and make the overall simulation experience more authentic. EA SPORTS' 25 million users can expect to see an improved ball physics engine and new player animations and controls. Players can make accurate, intelligent decisions about when to push, who to target and when to pass the ball, as well as how to perform specific actions. This takes the choice out of the player's hands and allows them to focus their energy on making the right decision in the perfect moment. In addition to pitch dynamics, this technology is bringing authenticity to off-ball actions like dribbles, switches and fakes. Players are aware of how long they will take to make a move, which direction they will make the movement and the likelihood of receiving a pass. The result is a more realistic feel of switching play and an authentic, distinct feeling between the real-life and simulated experience. Additional improvements for speed are being made to the overall game engine, including player control and response times, ball speeds, passing and shooting accuracy, the control of shots off-balance and the physics of goals being scored. In addition to the above-mentioned areas, the ball physics engine is being improved in FIFA 21, where the ball will have more responsive, natural behavior and will react more accurately to surrounding players' movements. Passing is improved across all the game modes and will be more responsive and accurate in all game modes as well as Real Play. Match physics engine improvements include: Ball movement: Improved ball reaction to physical and environmental factors, more varied ball movement across all pitch surfaces, ball re-enters the pitch at a more varied speed and more accurately, and improved effectiveness of some defenses, especially in very low energy matches. Improved ball reaction to physical and environmental factors, more varied ball movement across all pitch surfaces, ball re-enters the pitch at a more varied speed and more accurately, and improved effectiveness of some defenses, especially in very low energy matches. Player skill: Improved player physics and animations, improved reaction to ball contact, improved ball control, improved opponent defense, improved defense performance by type, more intelligence behind how defenders can cover space, more intelligence of how opponents can prepare for a pass or perform an intercept. Improved player physics and animations, improved reaction to ball contact, improved ball control, improved opponent defense, improved defense

Hi, thank you for playing FIFA and posting on this blog. I cannot help you with your friend problem but I just want to add here that when you say that other people could not be sending you friend requests, it could be because they did not get that they were not yet friends. If you were not able to reach your friend request then the problem might be that their friend list is not public (unless they set it to public with their profile). Do you know your friend's email address? If not you may want to ask them if they want their friend list to be public or not. It's easy to do that, look at their profile and on the second tab there should be a button to make it public or not.
