In other words, HyperMotion Technology represents the most powerful innovations in FIFA development and analysis to date. This new development is highly nuanced, and more in-depth than ever before. The goal of HyperMotion Technology is to create a new football experience and to balance speed, distance, quickness and accuracy of movement with the football action that occurs on the pitch. Chris Kinnaird, Global Director of FIFA 22 at EA Sports, commented: "We are excited to introduce this new generation of FIFA. Over the past two years, we have created a ground-breaking simulation of the beautiful game and have now created the most accurate movement simulation to date. We are looking forward to the reaction from players and the media as we begin to unleash the next stage of FIFA development." The goals of the new FIFA are to improve the responsiveness and timing of each player's movements on the pitch. The data from the motion capture suits is collected, processed and used by the engine to provide a comprehensive analysis of player performance over a high-intensity and high-quantity football match, as well as to provide gamers with dynamic game feedback and Player Impact Indicators (PII). Football now has the most detail and impact possible in a football game. It's about the timing, the acceleration, the agility, the control and the movement itself. The player's touch, speed, how well they turn, what angles they make with their foot, how well they take their first touch – it's all there. Key Features: The new features that were included in FIFA 22 are listed below. OiOi! The FIFA players have never looked better, or felt more alive. Players are faster, stronger, more agile and more intelligent, and the new agility moves, speed and extra-quickness features provide an enhanced sense of realism when controlling players and the ball. Dynamic Player Behaviour System FIFA 22 introduces a new "Dynamic Player Behaviour" system, which changes the behaviour of players in real-time based on inputs received from the game.
